

Bald Eagle

Haliaeetus leucocephalus

I want to know more...

The Bay of Fundy is a very important resting area for migrating birds; over 360 species of birds have been spotted throughout the region.

The Bald Eagle prefers habitats near coastlines, where they nest in tall mature trees. Here they can feed on fish, which they hunt with the aid of their exceptional vision.

Adult eagles have a distinctive snow white head and tail, with a brown/black body. Their eyes, large bill and feet are bright yellow. Young eagles have brown heads and bodies.

Females are larger than males weighing up to five kilograms with wingspans over two metres wide.
